Exchange students head for home

Memories fill hearts of new friends

By Paula Monarez

As the group boarded the bus, tears fell freely.

Eleven months ago, they had come here to learn about the American culture and education system. Now the 32 foreign exchange students were on their way home with many memories and a host of new friends.

"I'm going to miss them so very much," said Andrea Motrini, as he sadly looked at his host parents, Jeff and Teri Wichert. "They are like my family."

Motrini and the other foreign exchange students gathered at the Upland Presbyterian Church last week to bid goodbye to their host families.

The students from 22 different countries were part of the AFS International/Intercultural Program. They had arrived here last August to attend school and live with families in San Bernardino and Riverside counties.

Motrini, who is from Italy, made his home in Ontario with the Wichert family and attended Chaffey High School.

Jeff Wichert said Motrini has become so Americanized that he can no longer speak Italian well.

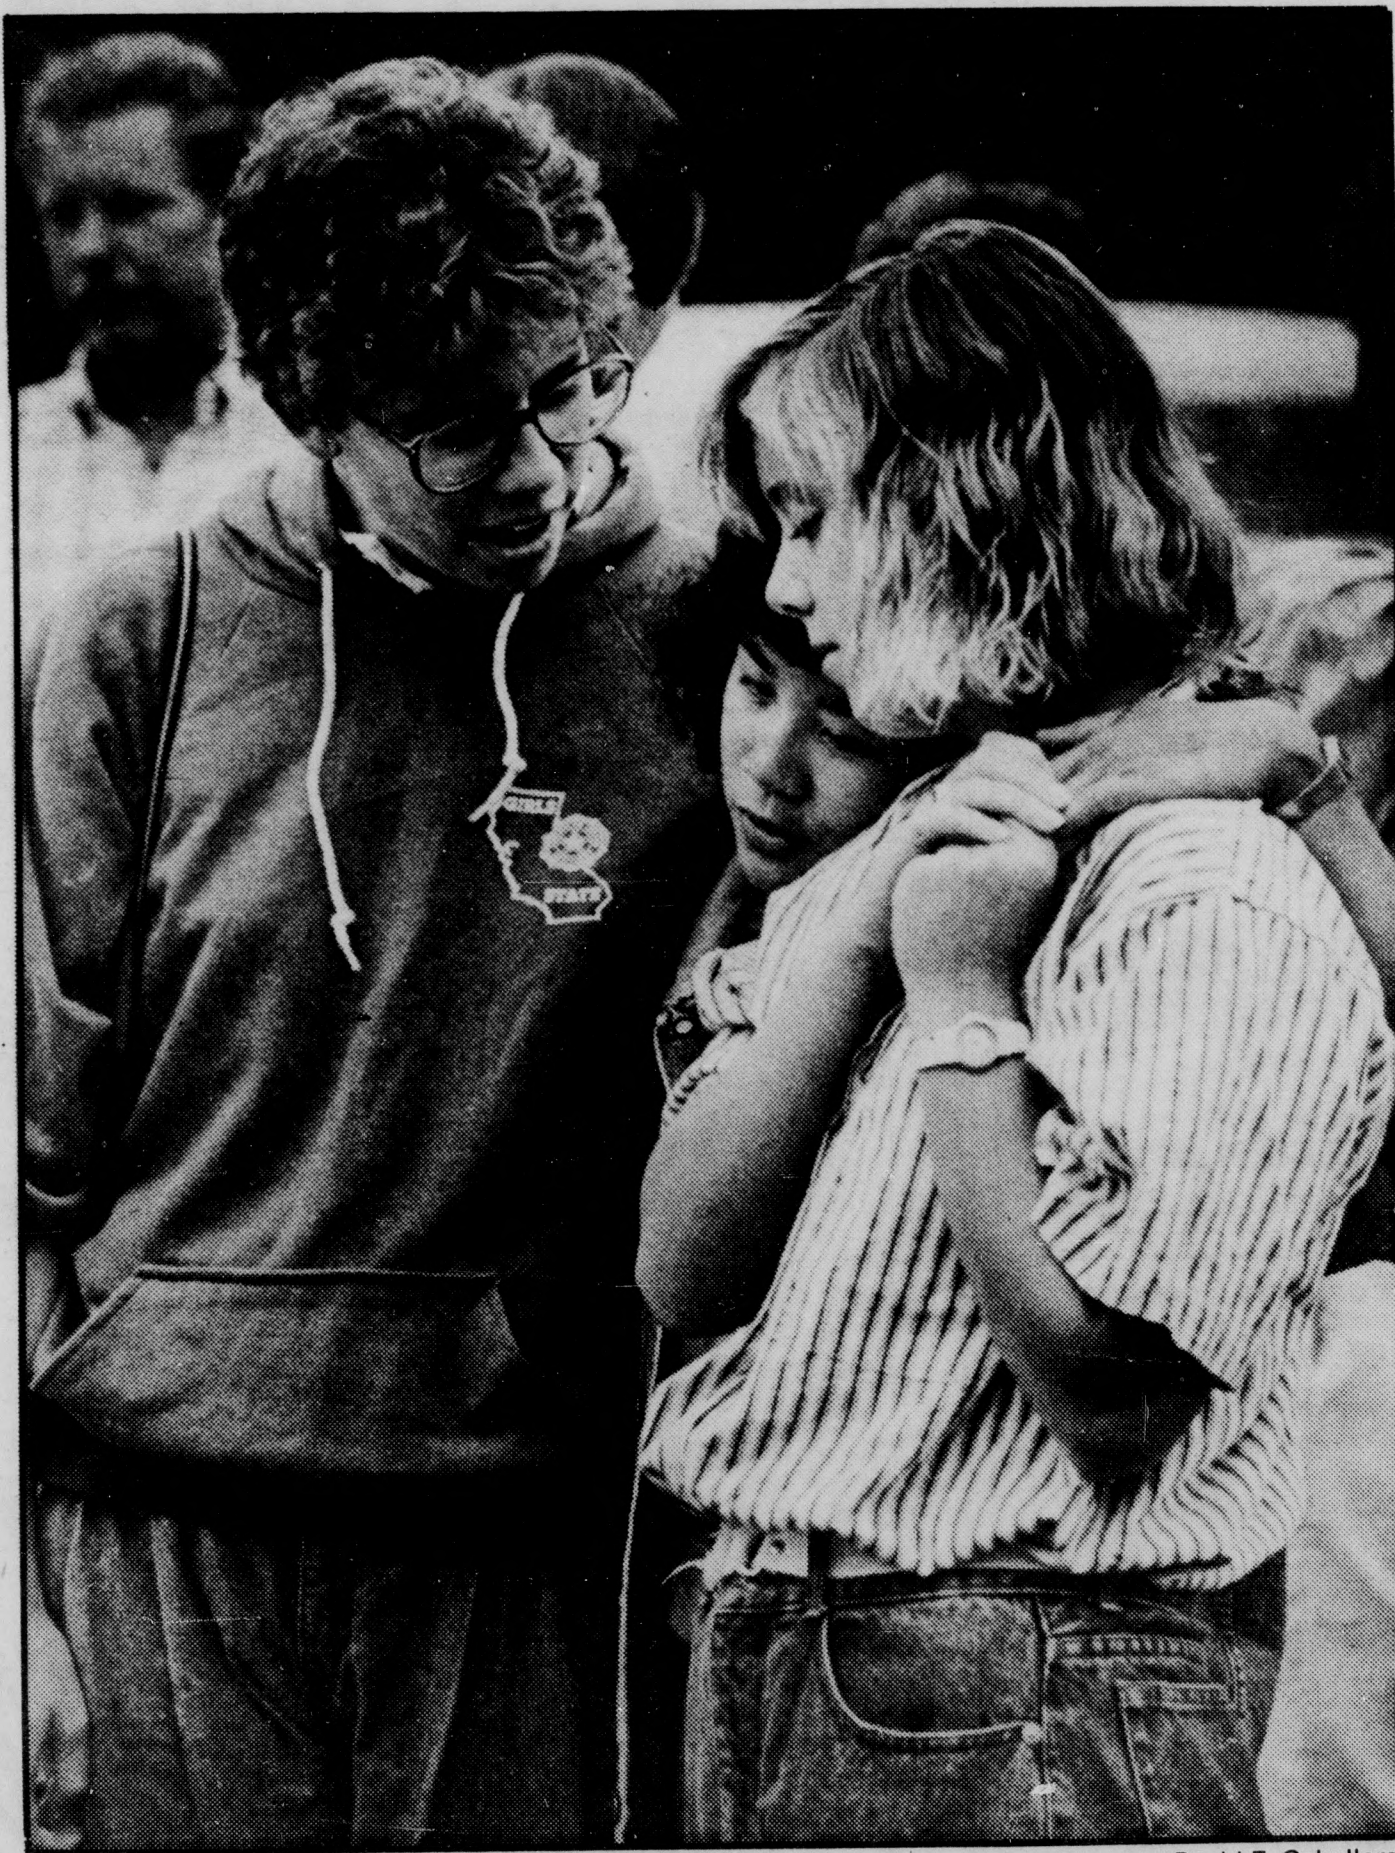

"His Italian is terrible," Wichert said. "When his parents were here visiting, his father kept laughing every time Andrea would try to interpret."

During his stay here, Motrini learned to love Mexican food and the independent attitude of young people.

"I am really going to miss tacos," the 18-year-old said.

What Motrini was not impressed with was American girls.

"They are too preoccupied with their looks," he said. "They are always worried about their makeup and their hair. In Italy, the girls are more natural."

Pam Zilius, left, and her sister, Laurann, right, spend a last few moments with Paolene Lam from France. The foreign exchange student stayed with the Zilius for an entire school year.

While Motrini learned a number of American customs, he also taught the Wicherts a few Sardinian traditions. "He showed us how to eat snails," said Teri Wichert. "You have to suck them out. It was awful and not a tradition we eagerly tried."

City OKs stop signs on 17th

By Diana E. Lundin

Upland city officials have agreed to place four stop signs on 17th Street on a trial basis despite reservations it may set an unwanted precedent.

Last week, the street and light committee acquiesced to residents who live on 17th Street between Euclid and Campus avenues.

Resident Bruce Dean had previously asked the committee for two stop signs on 17th Street and Francis Avenue but the request was denied.

The matter came before the City Council earlier in the month and it was sent back to the committee for another review.

This time, the committee agreed to not only the 17th Street and Francis signs but two stop signs at 17th Street and Second Avenue as well.

The signs will be temporarily placed for six months at the two intersections to see if they help slow traffic down on the route used as a short cut by Rancho Cucamonga commuters.

While last week's action represented a victory for the residents, it also is a headache for city officials who say they aren't warranted.

State and federal guidelines suggest a certain traffic volume and number of reportable accidents before signs are put in place.

The 17th Street stretch of roadway carries only 33 percent of the recommended traffic volume and has been the scene of one accident in the past year; thus, it doesn't meet the guidelines.

Traffic engineer Tom Danna said there are 27 other intersections similar to the 17th and Francis situation. In many cases, they come closer to meeting the guidelines than 17th Street, he said.

"It may not be nearly as effective as you think," City Engineer Fred Blanchard told Dean.

UHS summer classes begin minus contract

By Kimberly Heinrichs

When the Upland School District began its high school summer classes last month it forgot one thing.

The district, which only officially began serving Upland High School July 1, neglected to notify Chaffey Joint Union High School District of its plans to use the building and utilities still officially owned and paid for by the high school district.

"We didn't have a contract with Chaffey because we frankly forgot about it," UUSD Superintendent George Renworth said.

But after Chaffey Associate Superintendent Dean Smothers called him a week ago, Renworth prepared an agreement giving the high school district $12.50 per day for each of the five classrooms it used on school days from June 22 through Tuesday, he said.

The confusion arose because the Upland district originally was going to hold off on its summer school until it officially became unified, Renworth said.

"We originally weren't going to until July 1 because we didn't think we could collect the ADA," he said.

ADA stands for Average Daily Attendance or number of students present — the basis on which the state sends out education funds.

"But the state said we could," Renworth added. "For those (extra) days we could turn in a separate report."

Bette Harrison, Chaffey's assistant superintendent for instruction, said she was not sure why the new Upland district will be able to collect money for the first seven days of its courses before it officially included the high school.

The Chaffey high school district was not notified, although its property was used and the students attending classes still were technically Chaffey district pupils, she said.

"I frankly was surprised when I heard about it, but we have not discussed it within the district," said Harrison adding that both Smothers and Superintendent Mike Dirksen are on vacation.

When they come back it will be investigated, she said.

Cal Poly students to survey R.C. residents on smoking

By Lee Peterson

In Rancho Cucamonga, smoking can cause surveys.

Past debate over the "burning issue" of smoking in public places has spawned what is hoped will be a comprehensive gauge of public opinion.

In an effort to gather what city leaders hope will be pertinent insight into what people want from their City Council, students from Cal Poly Pomona will undertake a survey project in Rancho Cucamonga.

Councilwoman Deborah Brown, who is spearheading the survey, said the information obtained from the students' work will be useful to the council in making policy decisions.

In fact, the idea for the survey came about at a time when the council was discussing whether it should consider enacting a no-smoking in public places ordinance.

Brown said she suggested the Behavioral Sciences Department of Cal Poly would be interested in executing for the city a scientific poll of the public's mood.

Brown's husband, Wayne, is a member of the faculty of the nearby university and will be overseeing the project, in which students will receive class credit.

Door-to-door pollsters will quiz residents next fall in four topic areas — smoking ordinances, public safety, cultural arts and general city services.

For the next three months, subcommittees of citizens, city staff and students will be meeting to formulate the general "spirit" of the questions,

Five-year plan includes some street projects

Upland has found a way to spend its share of the local sales tax transportation funds, with a recent adoption of a five-year plan.

A number of arterial street projects were listed including the $1.2 million pavement reconstruction of 16th Street from Campus to Mountain avenues.

Arrow Highway and Eighth Street, from the east city limit to Mountain Avenue, will be widened and paved at an estimated cost of $1.2 million.

The City Council approved slurry seal coating, asphalt overlay or pavement reconstruction, depending on the condition, for all streets in the city over 17 years old.

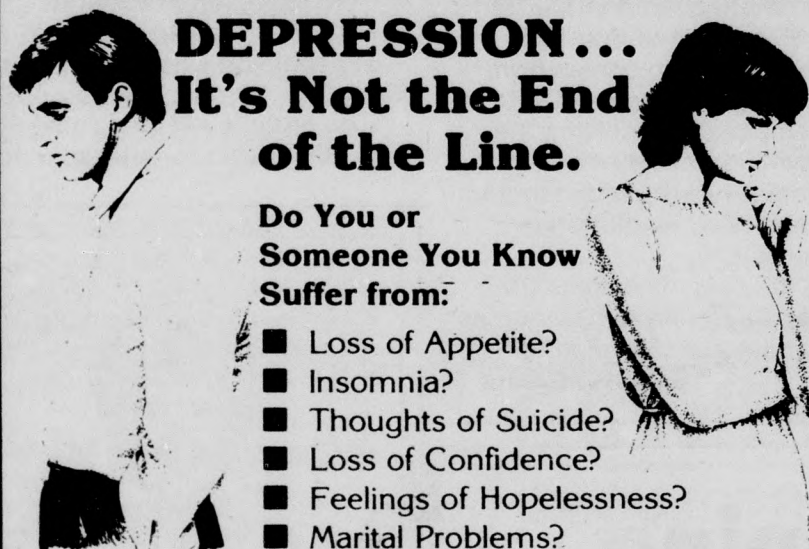

The price tag on the local street project is $2.2 million for just under 150 lane miles.

according to Assistant City Manager Robert Rizzo.

That information will be handed over to more students and their professors, who will write the actual questions. Dr. Brown, a professor of survey methodology, insisted the questions will be strictly

Riverside County's smog fee could be 'revolutionary' break

By Andrew Horan

A Riverside County Board of Supervisors' recent decision to charge land developers a smog fee could be a "revolutionary" break in the battle to clean Southern California's dirty skies.

Starting Aug. 1, the neighboring county will impose a $25 fee for every parcel in new residential developments. The money will help planners study how new housing developments cause smog.

"Increased traffic from commuting residents creates air pollution," explained Micheal McCall, a Riverside County supervising planner.

That's a point that smog regulators say they have been trying to get local politicians and planners throughout Southern California to understand for years.

Earlier this month, the South Coast Air Quality Management District governing board passed a bill that provides help to cities and counties that want to more seriously consider the impacts of new development on smog.

The goal of the resolution was that local politicians "recognize that development and growth lead to increases in air pollution, and that they must be (offset) in some way," according to Ron Ketcham, spokesman for the South Coast Air Quality Management District.

While planners and regulators speak of the pollution generated by commuting residents — at least 55 percent of Southern California's smog comes from vehicles, according to AQMD — their emphasis on solving the problem at home is new.

"It's a very, very wide-ranging task, and fairly revolutionary," McCall said.

For the past 10 years, AQMD and the California Air Resources Board have concentrated on unbiased and apolitical.

"Politics won't come into it because the students won't be politically steered in any direction," the councilwoman said, adding it's imperative people understand the survey will be a random sample, a scientific study.

"I'm real excited about it ... I just think it's going to give us a real handle on what people think out there," Brown said.

The project will quiz some 800 to 1,000 people to determine the opinions of Rancho Cucamonga's 80,000 residents.

Mayor Dennis L. Stout said he intends to rely heavily upon the information. "We've always felt that public input is the most important part of decision-making," Stout said.

Both Brown and Stout said the poll will likely be made an annual project.

City Manager Lauren Wasserman termed the city staff's involvement in the survey as "minimal."

YOUR BENEFITS UNDER WORKER'S COMPENSATION

Thomas W. Moga,
Attorney At Law
(Board Certified Specialist)

If you are injured while working you are entitled to four benefits:

1. The insurance company must pay all of your MEDICAL BILLS including your mileage to and from the doctors. Also, if you need medical attention for the rest of your life, the insurance company is responsible for this as well.

2. PAYMENTS TO YOU WHILE YOU ARE UNABLE TO WORK, and while you are recovering. This payment is called "temporary disability" and is two thirds of what you earn weekly.

3. THE INSURANCE COMPANY MUST PAY YOU FOR THE INJURY. This is called "permanent disability." This is where most injured employees need assistance. Many insurance companies pay the medical bills and the temporary disability and then close their file without paying the injured employee for his injury. REMEMBER, YOU HAVE FIVE YEARS TO SEEK PAYMENT FOR YOUR INJURY ONCE THE INSURANCE COMPANY HAS PAID YOUR MEDICAL BILLS OR PAID YOU TEMPORARY DISABILITY.

4. IF YOU ARE UNABLE TO RETURN TO YOUR OCCUPATION BECAUSE OF AN ON THE JOB INJURY, YOU ARE ENTITLED TO BE RETRAINED TO A NEW OCCUPATION. The insurance company must see to it that you are properly trained so that you may enter a new occupation. This could be accomplished in several ways:

1. Schooling
2. On the job training
3. Direct Placement

In any event, the insurance company must pay for all costs of the retraining program and pay you 2/3 of your weekly pay while you go through the retraining program. It costs you nothing.

The insurance company will have an experienced adjuster handling your claim; and if there are any court appearances needed, they will have a well established law firm to represent them. I strongly suggest that all injured employees seek representation by a law firm that is equally experienced in the "Laws of Worker's Compensation."

Upland unification becomes official

By Marianne Aiken

July 1 was the day Upland High School became part of the new Upland Unified School District.

Voters in five West Valley communities determined Nov. 4 the high school should leave the Chaffey Joint Union High School District and join Upland's elementary school system.

During the next three to five years, educators will be watching to see if unification works, said Upland Unified School District Superintendent George Renworth.

The idea of putting elementary schools and high schools together in one district is experiencing a rebirth, Renworth said.

"I think it's the new thing," he said.

An institution with a $32 million to $33 million budget now is being administered out of the Upland school district offices in an industrial park on West Ninth Street. Adding a high school to the Upland district added $9 million to the budget, and took away an equal chunk from the Chaffey district's budget.

The move also involves between 2,850 to 3,000 students.

This fall's incoming freshmen may graduate by the time the lost student population is recovered, said one high school district administrator.

"We will simply be in a maintenance mode until we can begin to build back the portion of the student population we lost," said the high school district's Assistant Superintendent Bette Harrison.

Unification means it will be a very difficult year next year at the remaining high schools in the district, she said.

Money for books and supplies has been cut, but no teachers have been laid off as a result of unification.

The high school district found jobs for all of the approximately 30 teachers from Upland High School who decided to remain with the Chaffey district. Most Upland High School teachers decided to stay at Upland.

Those who stayed at Upland lost the lifetime benefit package the Chaffey district offers its teachers upon retirement.

The transfer of Upland teachers to other high schools meant the Chaffey district significantly curbed its teacher recruitment efforts over the last year, Harrison said.

Now only a handful of teachers are needed at the high schools, in specialty areas like band and foreign language, Harrison said.

Although the high school district is claiming unification is a financial cripple, Renworth said the costs of unification balance out.

But money for schools can be

Agencies to get United Way $2.6 million

By Diana E. Lundin

Some 50 local agencies will be receiving their slices of the more than $2.6 million United Way pie with the close of a successful fund-raising season.

Mt. Baldy Region United Way officials had hoped to collect just under $2.8 million — or an 8 percent increase over last year — but fell short of the goal.

However, Daniel Griffin, Mt. Baldy regional vice president, finds no shame in the amount collected.

"It's very good because we raised more than last year," said Griffin.

Last year, fund-raising efforts provided agencies with allocations from a $2.5 million budget.

But while a little extra money eventually found its way into the United Way coffers, Griffin said the executive board had decided earlier this year to hold the agencies to their present level of funding.

The January decision was based on early results that showed the United Way would be unable to meet its initial objective, Griffin said.

But corporate gifts allowed the agency to boost its contributions, which Griffin called "significantly up" from last year.

General Dynamics had the largest corporate dollar increase over previous totals by 15 percent, giving $121,000 to United Way.

The employees of Southern California Gas Co. gave the highest per capita amount at $124 per person, for a total of $40,270.

Griffin said at the beginning of drive last fall, employee contributions — which account for 70 percent of United Way funds — were running about even over 1986.

But by the end of the drive, employee contributions were lagging, closing slightly lower over the same time last year.

The six agencies that will receive the most money from United Way are the Boy Scouts, $169,950; West End Family Counseling, $145,247; the American Red Cross, $141,143; the West End YMCA, $134,597; Family Services of Pomona, $115,744; and the Salvation Army of Ontario, $113,350.

Harold Nelms, a General Telephone executive and the local organization's new board chairman, was responsible for heading up the fund-raising this year.

Sterling Starr of General Dynamics Pomona division takes Nelms' old job for the 1987-88 campaign beginning at the end of the month.

Meanwhile, the Los Angeles United Way stopped $8.6 million short of its $90 million goal, raising $81.4 million.

A scandal last year focusing on unsecured loans made to United Way executives was partly blamed for slowing down employee contributions, officials said.

The shortfall also is attributed to changing conditions in the Southern California economy and a slow start of the campaign. In all, Los Angeles collected $3.2 million less than last year while other large cities posted an average 3 percent gain.

Museum renovation subject of study

By Andrew Horan

Ask Lou Ann Svenson and she'll tell you it takes a lot of imagination to see all the nuances of paintings hanging in the cramped art wing of the Ontario Museum of History and Art.

Museums are meant to spark the imagination, but as Svenson is quick to note, some visitors to the Ontario institution might find their flights of fancy taxed.

"This was designed as a city hall, not a museum," sighed the museum's director and curator recently.

The offices that once housed city planners and clerks are just too small to properly view paintings and other works of fine art on display at the museum, Svenson said.

"There are paintings you need to back away from," but stepping away puts one in a hallway or former kitchen, she said.

Plus, the current fluorescent lighting system "is terrible, and you don't get the proper colors," she said.

While the south wing was renovated and reopened in 1983 to house historical exhibits, the whole facility — including the second floor — is about to get a much needed facelift.

The City Council, which abandoned the South Euclid Avenue building in 1979 in favor of its new B Street chambers, agreed early this month to pay up to $19,800 for a respected Los Angeles architect's ideas on how best to renovate the building.

"It's too premature to talk about what the outcome will be," Brenda Levin said in a telephone interview.

"But the important story, from my perspective, is that the City Council has made a commitment to the museum ... and understands the concept of a master plan to find the highest and best use" for the whole building, she said.

And renovation should "make it easier for us to give far more professional and sophisticated exhibits," she said.

Unification/

spent more efficiently in a unified system, he claimed.

"There will be less money going to administration and more going directly to instruction," he said.

Some $500,000 will have been spent on physical changes to the high school by the time September rolls around, Renworth said.

Parking space at the high school has been expanded and 10 relocatable classrooms were leased to hold the 300-student increase in enrollment.

Offices, classrooms and recreational facilities in different parts of the 11th Street campus were painted and remodeled.

And a 40,000-square-foot addition that would include 30 classrooms and related facilities for the high school is contemplated for September 1989, Renworth said.

One of the side effects of unification is that all Upland students now can go to a high school with a name that matches their mailing address.

Most of the 430 Upland students who had been attending Chaffey, Valley View and Montclair high schools decided to take advantage of the opportunity offered by unification.

The majority of those who decided to stay at the other high schools are students who will graduate in 1988.

Some 2,850 students will settle into desks at Upland High School at the end of the summer, Renworth said, down from earlier estimates of 2,950.

Renworth said he sees no other West Valley school districts jumping on the unification bandwagon.

"I think they're waiting to see how it goes," he said.

Harrison agreed. "It will be years until we know whether it (unification) was a successful experiment or not," she concluded.

Smog/

technological fixes on vehicles and factories:

But as regulators have repeatedly said in recent months, few new technological fixes remain — and yet the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency is scheduled to slap economic sanctions on the Southland and a half-dozen other California cities Tuesday for failing to meet a deadline for providing residents with clean, healthy air to breathe.

The air over California is 3½ times dirtier than the "safe" level.

Faced with a crisis, politicians and regulators are turning to measures they may not have accepted just five years ago.

"I'm hearing from some unusual quarters that it's just got to happen," said Tim Johnson of the Inland Empire Economic Council.

"All of the local land-use authorities throughout Southern California are going to have to begin taking into account the air quality impacts of land-use decisions," added Johnson, who works to bring new employers to the area.

Riverside County is the first city or county in the Southland to impose developer smog fees, but interest in the idea seems to be building.

Johnson and Ketcham both said several cities are considering similar action.

Larry Walker, San Bernardino County's 4th District supervisor, said Thursday that the supervisors "need to look at what they've done. Conceivably we might involve ourselves in the same way.

"We've got to realize that growth alone is the biggest polluter in Southern California," he said.

But county planners are not so sure that a new fee is needed.

"We do (assess air quality impacts) through a very disjointed process" now, said senior planner Michael O'Brien.

"But we address the air quality issue, and we're going to perhaps do it (in the future) through a separate element in our general plan," O'Brien said.

Riverside planners will use the $230,000 that the smog fee is expected to raise to create their own separate air quality element in the county plan, McCall said.

"We will be able to compute what the anticipated total pollutants will be based on regional figures, then add all the new development to come up with a baseline," McCall said.

"Then, if a new project exceeds (projections) ... that might be a good enough reason to turn it down" or require measures to offset expected smog, he said.

While the Riverside County action may be revolutionary, experts warn it is only a tentative first step.

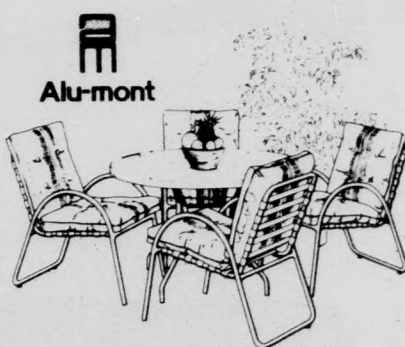

The action covers only unincorporated county land and "it's not going to do any good unless the other counties (and cities) do it too," Johnson said.

"Those boundaries mean nothing to air quality," he added.

Vandalism upsetting to preschool's owners

By Lee Peterson

Irving and Patricia Hammer hope they'll still have a preschool left to renovate by the time their blueprints wind their way through Rancho Cucamonga City Hall.

It isn't the deliberate pace of the normal planning process dismaying the Hammers, it's the children — youngsters who have seemingly laid claim to the dormant preschool site in a quiet neighborhood.

The Arcadia couple, who own and operate three other preschool/day-care facilities in the Southland, find themselves routinely chasing young children from the two-building complex at 8736 Baker Ave., which came into the national spotlight last summer when previous owners were ordered to stand trial on charges of racketeering and car bombing.

The property — vacant since abandoned by the former owners — has been vandalized. Bathrooms, windows and light fixtures have borne the brunt of the mischief.

The Hammers have hired a night watchman to keep children at bay, and a daytime handyman has instructions to regularly clear trespassers from the site.

Patricia Hammer said they don't want a feud with the neighborhood youth. The kids however, have responded with indifference and, at times, belligerence to the new owners' pleas.

Once the Hammers are able to bring contractors to the site to make the necessary changes and repairs, Mrs. Hammer feels the vandalism will stop.

However, work cannot begin until they receive clearance from City Hall. Under the normal planning process they can expect to begin in a few months.

The couple took ownership of the land in early May and have since filed the remodeling plans with the city, in anticipation of what will be their fourth such facility.

Plans will undergo grading, technical and design reviews before the public hearing at the planning commission, when the Hammers will be told either to proceed or to amend their design.

Trees and shrubs have been trimmed and the broken glass swept up, but as long as the buildings look run-down, they will be targets of further vandalism, Hammer said.

"The kids think this is a big game. We can't let them in there and we don't want them to vandalize it anymore," Hammer said.

The damage inflicted upon the structures is an indiscriminate trashing of walls and light fixtures. Lacking the physical strength for a thorough demolition of the site, the unknown vandals did the worst they could.

The worst is long gone, however, relative to the past history of the site, when the school was under different ownership.

The old Pacific Coast Preparatory School ceased operation in August last year, soon after owner Charlotte Wyckoff was linked to fire-bombings of cars belonging to former employees.

Last month, Wyckoff was sentenced to two years in federal prison in connection with the bombings. In addition, state social services authorities began a process soon after the case began in May 1986 to close the school.

ENTERTAINMENT & DINING GUIDE

Tami Molineux, left, and Arnold Stephans work to restore the Grove Theater in Upland to its original splendor. Owner Gene Harvey also is renovating the Granada Theater in Ontario.

New Grove Theater harks back to times long past

'The experience you have here can't be duplicated...'

By Diana E. Lundin

Forty and fabulous.

That's the ambiance Gene Harvey wants his audiences to experience when they watch a movie at The Grove Theater in Upland's Town Center.

Harvey recently purchased the old Grove to restore it to its original 1947 splendor.

"The experience you have here can't be duplicated in any multi-plex," said Harvey.

While the golden age of such movie palaces may be long past their prime, Harvey said he thinks there are those who still yearn to capture the 1940s spirit.

"Once in a while, you have to step back in time and enjoy the nostalgic things," he said. "We live in such a fast age, if you blink once, you miss a lot."

Harvey began renovating the theater at the beginning of the month. He studied old manuals on theater design to choose the colors of the Grove, which harken back to decades ago.

"I picked colors from the '40s — corals, greens, pinks, blues. By coincidence, they're all back in vogue," he said.

Neon lighting will be an integral part of the new look of the old Grove.

"The Grove had an abundance of neon. Little by little, I'm restoring it. The architect who designed this theater loved dropped coves with indirect neon lighting," he said. "It's so wonderful."

The outside will also be graced with neon, on the marquee and on the tower.

But the building isn't the only restoration to be done. Harvey wants to cultivate a different air for movie goers.

"I'm not just talking about the building. I'm talking about bringing back the atmosphere," he said. "I want to create an atmosphere of respectability, pleasure, entertainment, excitement."

He wants his patrons to think "it's absolutely a pleasure to do business here."

Movies are such an important part of people's lives, he said, though they watch them in adverse conditions.

"You have employees with surly attitudes, management that doesn't care and film companies with a very low regard for people's wants and tastes," Harvey said.

"That the theater business thrives in these conditions comes as a surprise to people."

The recent proliferation of video and cable movies doesn't pose a threat to the film industry as far as Harvey is concerned.

"I think they are wonderful .... I have all of those at home. What they've done is made people

Theater hoped to make center night spot

The Grove's resurgence may aid Town Center

By Diana E. Lundin

During the day, Upland's historic Town Center is a lively place.

Restaurants, flower shops, department stores, book merchants and purveyors of antiques cater to an eclectic group of customers who tire of the busy mall scene.

But by 6 in the evening, merchants close up shop, not to open again until the following morning.

The restoration of The Grove Theater, on Ninth Street, may begin a slow process of change, a resurgence to the Town Center's night life.

Steve Haltom, president of the Upland Town Center Retail Merchants Association, said the theater's renovation may cause some of the businesses in the four-block area to keep longer hours.

"It probably won't happen immediately, but it might be something in the future," he said of the 65 businesses in the association.

Theater owner Gene Harvey is telling some of the shopkeepers to plan on staying open if they don't want to miss out on extra business once the 40-year-old movie house re-opens in July.

"I said, 'You better get ready and hire some more people,'" an optimistic Harvey said.

"Theaters and retail businesses can work so well together because the theater attracts business that wouldn't ordinarily come here," Harvey said.

One woman, who came to The Grove years before it began showing Mexican movies, told Harvey she was delighted in the renovation because the only reason she came to downtown anymore was to go to a lace shop.

"I think the renovation will help bring back some of the charm of the downtown area," he said.

And Haltom agrees. "It's magnificent that it's been brightened up and refurbished. The appearance alone is upbeat and terrific. We need more of that," he said.

Theater

more aware of the movies. They think, 'This must be even better in a theater,'" he said.

Still up in the air is just what type of movies the 700-seat Grove will show when it re-opens sometime in July.

"Independents have a terrible time competing against the chains," he said. "This is one of the most competitive bidding zones in Southern California."

Consequently, it's much tougher for smaller movie houses to show the first-run films shown by multiple-theater complexes. But Harvey isn't deterred. Instead, he's looking to show double features of recent movies at discount prices.

There's a potential to show children's matinee movies along with more esoteric art, classics or foreign film series.

Harvey once operated a theater that ran an underground film program. "It's wonderful. Six people walk in and they are so enthusiastic, they tell two others," he said, laughing.

Ironically, Harvey owned The Grove from 1968 to 1978, when he sold it because he wanted to get out of the theater industry.

But now he's back in business, with not only The Grove, but The Granada, Ontario's 1923 movie house, and the Canyon in San Dimas. Still, the Upland theater is his favorite.

"The Grove is very dear to my heart. I feel like I'm coming home," he said.

Register for school

Students new to Upland High School should come in during the summer and register for fall classes, said Assistant Principal Pat Castagnaro.

"New students should come in during the summer so we can spend some extra time with them," Castagnaro said.

Counselors will be working Wednesdays throughout the summer. There will also be a special orientation for students later in the summer, Castagnaro said.

For an appointment with a counselor, call 981-5861.

Changing Jobs?

$30,000 to $100,000

If you're thinking about a new job... then soon you will be facing the biggest challenge of your career. Unfortunately, when most people are forced to job hunt, they write a resume, and visit a few recruiters and companies. Then, they're surprised when nothing happens. What's worse, their job search quickly turns from weeks into months. But, it doesn't have to be this way.

For years, as one of California's leading outplacement firms, we have continued to assist serious, aggressive job seekers through a personalized marketing campaign. We're experts at helping them get energized... at moving them into the job markets fast... and at helping them gain access to the "right" opportunities... including new and more exciting career options. If you're thinking about a new job, don't make the mistake of doing all the wrong things... and don't wait too long before calling us. We'll be happy to sit down with you, assess your situation and see what we can do for you. Send a resume or call today for a free and confidential appointment. John Bohls and Associates, 3403 10th Street, Suite 700, Riverside, CA 92501. (714) 682-3690.
